We want your book recommendations

Hanwell library turns 120 this year. With that we want to involve you in our celebrations in as many ways as possible.

We are starting "120 suggestions, for 120 years" a physical and digital board that highlights suggested books from our Hanwell Community Library community. To get involved, share a book that you would recommend to someone else, with a short explanation as to why you think they should read it and include your name (if you want to)!

You can email us at HCL@hanwellcommunitylibrary.org.uk or visit this form bit.ly/hcl120books.

Further updates

Extended Thursday Openings

On Thursday evenings our extended opening times continue until 7pm - you have 2 extra hours to study, work, relax, read or collect/ return your books.

2025 IS OUR 120TH ANNIVERSARY

2025 will be 120 years since Hanwell Library first opened to the public.

On September 27th 1905, Hanwell Library opened - 120 years later we will be celebrating what the library has held all these years: Stories!

To celebrate this momentus occassion, we want to invite you to interact with us and our space in new ways. We want to continue to encourage community connection and the use of the space as somewhere for YOU to access the resources (whether physical or emotional) that you need.

We hope you will continue to support us in the ways you can.

Would you like to write a book review, short-story, poem, or library/ book-related article?

We have a new blog (on Substack!) and we would love to spotlight more of our local writers. Whether this is fiction, non-fiction or a review we would love to welcome you to get in touch.

As a library, we know books and literature are deeply connected to most of what we do, one of the most interesting things about this is the various ways people connect literature with other forms and experiences, challenging our expectations.

We would like to invite you to write something for our blog and for our newsletter.

If this is of interest, please email hcl@hanwellcommunitylibrary.org.uk
